F. H. REMINGTON, Manager.

Robb's plurality over Burks in the Iron County Primary last Saturday was 233. This was a better vote than was expected for Mr. Burks, as Iron County was one of Robb's strongholds and he was expected to carry it almost solid, with the aid of the money he is known to have spent.—St. Francois Herald.

Married—Sunday, June 3, 1900, at the M. E. Church parsonage, in Desloge, James E. Vance of Flat River, and Miss Cora Silsby of Elvins, Rev. A. E. Williams officiating. The bride is a daughter of F. K. Silsby—prominently known in Elvins, and the groom is well and favorably known in Flat River.—Flat River Lead Belt News.

Show us an American whose blood does not thrill, whose heart does not beat the stronger, and whose mind is not elevated a notch or two, at the sight of Old Glory waving its graceful folds to the pulsating breeze—show us such a man and we'll find no difficulty in pointing out a monster sans love, sans pride, sans feeling, sans everything!

We publish a correspondent's account of the recent murder in the west end of this county. Another account in the Centerville Reformer says Asher took hold of Mrs. Hall when she tried to prevent his clearing the road, and the killing resulted. There are probably two sides to this, as to all other questions; but anyway the killing appears to have been the unnecessary result of an old grudge.

Nelson Campbell, who lives on Marble Creek about ten miles south of Ironton, lost a good horse in a rather singular manner Wednesday afternoon of last week. The animal was grazing near the house, and in some way or other knocked over a bee hive. The bees fairly covered the horse and stung him so severely that in four or five hours the animal died. Mr. Campbell thinks he's in pretty hard luck; and so do we.

The troops at the range left Tuesday for Jefferson Barracks. The last two weeks of their stay the soldiers "boycotted" Ironton because two of their number had been arrested and placed in jail by the city authorities for most disorderly conduct. The city authorities were perfectly justified, and only did their duty. The military man is much inclined to the idea that he should not be subject to civil regulations. We'll tell them this, though: when in Arcadia Valley they will have to track the law or pay the consequences.

Several persons came near meeting death by drowning while trying to cross the ford at Flat River on last Sunday. This ford is usually deep and the swollen condition of the river made it very dangerous water indeed. Henry Sikes first attempted to cross, but his buggy was overturned and with difficulty he saved himself and team, and later with the assistance of Bert Bowland and some ropes he drew the buggy ashore only to find that a number of articles which he had placed in the buggy had washed out and away. Later in the day a team and carriage from Ironton with two ladies, a little child and a driver, were attempting to cross. The driver deserted the women and swam to the bank. Geo. K. Williams and two other men succeeded in rescuing the women and child.—Farmington News.

The Building Committee of the new Presbyterian church wishes to correct a misapprehension of the meaning of the term "collector" as used in the communication last week. There will be no resorting to the law to collect any pledge on the subscription list, but it is the purpose to send a member of the subscription committee to receive subscriptions unpaid by July 15. This will be done as a matter of convenience to the subscribers as well as to hasten the collection of the pledges. The church does not want any money that is not given freely. It is inferred, however, that all who have subscribed will willingly pay the amount of their subscriptions when called upon, or make satisfactory arrangements to pay later if inconvenient to do so at once. It should be remembered that all the pledges were due March 1st, 1900.

A conditional sale agreement was filed in the Recorder's office of this county last Monday by and between the Iron Mountain Company and McNair & Camp of St. Louis for the sale by the former to the latter of all ore mined and lying on the surface of land owned by it at Iron Mountain; certain ore stored at the Missouri Furnace yards in St. Louis; certain ore contained in what are known as the Carondelet dumps, and the ore now remaining in the pillars of the mine known as Incline No. 1, for the consideration of $60,000, to be paid in four installments of $12,500 each, as the ore is removed. The use of the lands, unencumbered or unoccupied houses, belonging to the Iron Mountain Co., machinery, railroad tracks, locomotives, etc., is granted to the purchasers in removing ore. No land, however, is included in the sale, but when the right of the purchaser to remove the ore shall have ceased, on conditions named in the contract, peaceable possession of the lands, etc., shall be delivered up to the Iron Mountain Co.—Farmington Times.

The Fourth and the Parade.

The weather man co-operated effectively with the appreciative citizens of the Valley in making a big fourth for the "band-boys". The A. V. C. Band deserves the patronage of the public, but the degree of interest manifested by those who participated in the parade exceeded the expectations of the most hopeful. The celebration began in the early morning, with the booming of cannon and other kindred noise-makers.

The parade proved one of the best features of the day. It was excellently managed and carried out in beautiful order—much to the satisfaction of the hundreds of spectators. At the head of the procession were Masters Hartford Collins and Willie Shelby, each mounted on horse back. They were followed by Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Collins, carrying the emblem of our existence—the stars and stripes. Next came the Arcadia Valley Cornet Band in their new wagon, which, to say nothing of the beautiful strains of music produced by its occupants, was a joy to behold. It is a veritable work of art, and destined to be looked upon with pride for many years. We venture to assert that no band in South-east Missouri has a wagon that will compare favorably with this one in its exquisite beauty. The white and golden colors of the wagon harmonize beautifully with the white tints and golden horns of the members of the band.

The splendor of the band wagon and the conforming appearance of the band boys, however, did not eclipse in its attractive features, that which came next in order—the Ladies' Cavalcade under the management of Mrs. Bond and Mrs. Jones. "Liberty" float, consisting of a bevy of Arcadia Valley's most beautiful girls, arranged in pyramidal form, with Miss Adele Hanson carrying the stars and stripes, presented a picture that may well be designated "a joy for ever." Following the beautiful float came the cyclists under the leadership of Dr. Gay. The wheels were artistically decorated with the national colors, and the riders proved themselves skillful wheelmen. Next came Mr. W. T. Gay's Trade Float with anvils resounding with the blows of two stalwart artisans. This float immediately preceded the "Representative of All Nations," originated by the well-known genius and artist, Captain W. H. Byers.

"Dot Leedle Cherman Band" and "The Heathen Chinese" brought forth convulsions of laughter, and in point of originality were conceded to be second to no other feature of the parade. "Clowns Muleback" did full credit to the comical individuals they represented. Schwab's neat float was strikingly suggestive of the thriving business it represented. The Modern Woodmen, with the paraphernalia of their lodge, including the goat, did ample justice in the way of contributing to the amusement of the crowd. Jno. Albert's furniture float was followed by Mr. Jake Lopez's float "The Landing of Columbus." This was a most unique and striking representation of the historic scene, well executed by this enterprising young business man. This was followed by Uncle Sam represented by Mr. E. Hasty riding on a Revolutionary cannon. The pen can no more than suggest the excellence of this representation.

These special displays were all followed by a great number of artistically decorated vehicles of all sorts and sizes too numerous to mention. The efficient marshals, Messrs. W. T. Gay, J. L. Baldwin and I. A. Marshall, displayed great skill in the management of the procession.

To sum up: The 124th anniversary of our nation's birth was commemorated at Ironton in a manner that would reflect credit on a much larger town.

Everybody was delighted with the performance and the band boys should be proud of the hearty cooperation of the citizens who contributed so largely to their success.

NOTES.

No accident marred the enjoyment of the day.

The band "cleared" its wagon.

Drunks and rows were conspicuously absent.

The cannon fire-cracker ought to be exploded from the lonely mountain-top or on some desert isle.

The Flying Dutchman is always an easy favorite.

Redden took snap-shots along the line of parade.

The kodak, also, was greatly in evidence.

Hurrah for the weather-cherk!

Director Byers' band was unique and original and harmonious.

Old Sol can't burn out the spirit of the dance.

Mr. E. E. Bollinger read the Declaration, prefacing by a few remarks which were singularly well chosen and in delivery away beyond the average.

The citizen of Iron county who did not come to the celebration—his was the loss.

P. S.—It didn't rain!

A Tragedy.

RED POINT, MO., June 26, 1900.
One of the most dastardly, cold-blooded murders was committed in the West End of Iron county, about four miles from Red Point, that has ever darkened the fair name of Iron county, Sunday, June 24. The victim was James W. Asher; the perpetrators, Thomas Hall and his mother, Martha Hall.

Bad blood had existed between Asher and Halls for some time. Several times they had threatened Asher's life, and Tom had drawn a gun on him a number of times. They had sued Asher several times at law, on various pretexts; but always failed in their suits. Each failure added more fuel to their already consuming fire of hatred, until their vengeance was somewhat appeased Sunday morning when Asher was shot down in the public road, in the presence of three other men.

Jacob Clements, a young man who lives just above the Halls on the same creek, started to church Sunday morning about nine o'clock, going horseback and gun. As he had been told by the Halls that the road was leading from Bay's and Clements' to church house and to mill, for some time, each time some of Bays or Clements having to clear the road. Saturday evening the road was filled with trees again. When Clements came to where the trees had been cut across the road, he could not get through; so he called to his folks at the house to bring him an ax. A young man by the name of Summer started with the ax—Clements' father and Asher with him. When they got to where the trees were across the road, Summer began to cut the limbs out of the road and Clements piled the brush out of the way. Soon the old lady Hall came up and began to abuse the men for clearing the road, claiming that the road was on her land. She ordered them to stop, but they worked on. She made some threats and called her son. He stepped around from behind some fallen trees with a Winchester rifle in his hands, and said, with a bitter oath attached, "Jim Asher, I'm going to kill you." Asher said, "Hold on Tom Hall, I'm not doing anything." Instantly Hall fired, the ball entering his left side near the heart, penetrating his chest. "He fell where he was standing. Hall reloaded his gun, and told young Clements that he was going to kill him too. Clements jumped behind some tree tops and told his father and Summer to run. None of them had any weapons. Clements ran to where his horse was holding his horse, mounted and soon notified the neighbors. Some got to where Asher was lying within about fifteen minutes after the shot was fired. This was between nine and ten o'clock that afternoon.

A coroner's jury was summoned and an inquest held over the body at Mr. Clements' house where Asher had been carried before he died. The jury Hall fired, the ball entering his left side near the heart, penetrating his chest. "He fell where he was standing. Hall reloaded his gun, and told young Clements that he was going to kill him too. Clements jumped behind some tree tops and told his father and Summer to run. None of them had any weapons. Clements ran to where his horse was holding his horse, mounted and soon notified the neighbors. Some got to where Asher was lying within about fifteen minutes after the shot was fired. This was between nine and ten o'clock that afternoon.

Warrants were issued for their arrest, but at this writing they are still at large.

Asher leaves a wife and four little children.
